Senate Hopeful In Appomattox Last Thursday

Representative William Lloyd Scott, a conservative Republican congressman from the 8th District, has announced that he will oppose William B. Spong, Jr., for the United States Senate seat, subject to the election on November 7, 1972.

In making a campaign swing throughout the State of Virginia Scott was campaigning in Appomattox Thursday, July 6th, and was a visitor in the TIMES-VIRGINIAN office.

Born in Williamsburg and a resident of Fairfax County since 1947, Rep. Scott attended college and law school at night while working full time for the Federal government. He earned a Juris degree from George Washington University. He was elected to Congress in November of 1966 to represent the 8th Congressional District and he has worked for the Federal government, exclusive of his Congressional service, for more than 25 years.

Congressman and Mrs. Scott are justly proud of their daughter and two sons, all graduates of the College of William and Mary.

Scott expressed dismay at forecasts that 40 million eligible voters would not cast ballots this fall. He said that voting is the obligation we owe to those who fought to establish our Republic. He said that as Americans, we need more than pride in our country, we need
